

RedVPN collects non personally identifiable information to improve the quality of services provided to you.

Use of data

RedVPN uses the collected data to achieve various goals:

- Keeping the service up to date
- Notification of changes in services
- Collection or analysis of non-Personally Identifiable Information (PII) about the network to improve VPN services
- Monitoring the use of VPN services
- Identifying and prevention of technical problems and troubleshooting

Data Transfer

Non-PII data may be transferred to computers and servers outside of your country, state, city, or region with different jurisdictions with different data retention laws from where you live. Your acceptance of these Terms and Conditions indicates your consent to this possible transfer. RedVPN will take all necessary measures to ensure that non-PII data remains secure in accordance with this policy, and this information will not be transferred to any organization or country, except after applying adequate controls on issues such as maintaining the security of your data and other non-PII.

Disclosure of information for law enforcement purposes

Since RedVPN is made and operated in the United States and is a product of a company registered in the United States, it may be required under certain conditions, by the authorities of the United States government and in response to a valid request by the courts, to disclose the non-PII mentioned above.